

A life is made of many threads.

Brand wording and the four story areas

Stories woven together.

The kindness you received. The faith you lived. The time and money you sowed into others. Gather those stories into a gift for someone you love.

The idea behind the words

Time Tapestry invites a person to share the moments, people, beliefs, and acts of generosity that shaped their life, so someone they love can know those stories and carry them forward.

A thread is a particular memory.

The tapestry is the life those memories belong to. Following a thread brings someone closer to the person behind the story.

A meal brought to the door, a difficult choice made in faith, an afternoon spent helping someone, and a few words for a grandchild can all belong to the same life.

The invitation

You can begin with one story. The person does not need to know how to tell their whole life at once.

Working wording overview · October 2, 2026. The main headline, tagline, introduction, chapter names, and short descriptions are preserved from the preview you liked. Expanded guidance and interview questions are drafts.

The people and faith that shaped a life.

01 · Kindness received

The people who helped shape you.

This thread begins with what someone received: care, encouragement, practical help, patience, or an example that stayed with them. It makes room for the people whose generosity helped shape a life.

CONVERSATION STARTER

Tell me about someone whose kindness has stayed with you.

Begin with a particular person or moment. Let the storyteller explain why it stayed with them.

02 · A life of faith

The choices behind what you believe.

This thread connects faith to lived experience: people who helped someone follow Jesus, moments of trust, questions, prayer, and choices made in ordinary life.

CONVERSATION STARTER

Can you tell me about a time your faith shaped a choice you made?

Let the storyteller's own words carry what they believe. Ask one question at a time, and follow a detail they actually shared.

What you gave. What you hope they carry.

03 · What you sowed

The ways you gave to others.

This thread gathers stories of generosity: time, attention, care, service, and money. The interest is in what those choices meant to the person sharing them.

CONVERSATION STARTER

When you think about the time or money you gave to others, is there a story you would like someone you love to know?

Make room for financial generosity without making a dollar amount the measure of the story. Sharing an amount is voluntary. The purpose is to pass on the values and character behind the choice.

04 · What I hope you carry

Words for someone you love.

This thread turns toward the recipient. It gives the storyteller room to share what mattered, what they learned, and what they hope their loved one remembers.

CONVERSATION STARTER

What would you most like this person to understand about your life?

A story can invite understanding while leaving room for the recipient's own life. Personal encouragement or Scripture can belong here when the storyteller chooses and approves it.

Follow a thread.

Each story belongs to the same life. Choose one to see how it opens.

The voice

Warm, personal, and unhurried. A thoughtful conversation across a table. Use the weaving language at meaningful moments, then let plain language do the rest.

Our vocabulary: thread, story, woven, kindness, faith, generosity, remember, share, carry forward, someone you love.

Wording to carry through the experience

Tapestry: “Choose a thread. Find a story.”

Actions: “Open a thread” and “Preview a conversation.”

Conversation: “A conversation for someone you love.” “Ready when you are.” “Take your time.” “Pause for a moment.”

Review, proposed: “Does this sound like you? Is there anything you would like to change before sharing?”

Postcard: “A little piece of their life, arriving in your hands.”

The postcard becomes an invitation back to the whole story. An ordinary moment at the mailbox can open a conversation.

A personal postcard invitation

A story for you.

There are things I want you to know about the people who shaped my life, and the faith and kindness I hope you carry forward.

Preview stories and postcard examples are illustrative, not testimonials. Use “sowed” to describe generosity, without promising a financial return. Any quoted Scripture needs its actual wording, reference, translation, and storyteller approval. Product promises should match the working experience.